

SHOT AS HE PICKS UP BUNDLE LEFT FOR BLACK HAND

Alleged Extortioner Fights Detective Till Bullet Puts Him Down.

In the prison ward at Bellevue Hospital, with a bullet wound in his right shoulder, is Salvatore Cani, a young Sicilian, of No. 323 Elizabeth street. If he is well enough he will be arraigned today in Essex Market Court on a charge of trying to extort $1,000 from Santo Giociano of No. 366 Broom-street by Black Hand methods.

For weeks Giociano has been receiving threats. A special delivery letter yesterday told him that unless he placed $1,000 in a bundle under the stoop at No. 217 Forsyth street at 10 o'clock last night he and his wife and three children would be put to death at 10.35.

Giociano went to Detective Carrao at Headquarters and asked protection. A bundle of waste paper was made by the detective and Giociano dropped it under the stoop at 10 o'clock.

Carrao was hiding in a doorway across the street. Three minutes after the bundle had been left a man came lurching along the street. Suddenly he crawled under the stoop and got the bundle. Then Carrao seized him and a hard fight began.

The man fought with such desperation that Carrao, to save himself, drew his revolver and, using it as a club, knocked the man down, but he was on his feet quickly, and then Carrao shot, the bullet passing through the man's right shoulder. He fell with a curse and was handcuffed.

He was taken to Bellevue Hospital. While being stripped of his clothing the handcuffs were taken from his wrists.

Instantly he leaped at Carrao and screamed: "Don't let that man get to my clothes. He will put something in the pockets." Then he fainted. The doctors said his condition was serious.

SAYS THIRD DEGREE FORCED CONFESSION HE KILLED GIRL

McKenna on Witness Stand Says He Dropped Little Sigrid Eckstrom in Play.

When his trial in General Sessions was continued today, Joseph J. McKenna had recovered his calm. Yesterday he told on the stand a thrilling story, declaring the police had subjected him to such torture under the third degree that to end it he had falsely confessed the guilt of the murder of six-year-old Sigrid Eckstrom, with which he is charged. McKenna swore he had been playing with the child, teasing her up and down, and had dropped her. He said he was frightened, had taken her into the cellar and, not knowing if she were dead, had thrust her into a coal bin and then hurried to Mount Vernon, where he was arrested.

Capt. Price testified he had not talked to McKenna more than two hours, but he said it was a case where "very exhaustive methods" were needed and, had it been necessary, he "would have talked to the prisoner a week to get the truth out of him." Price denied he had even remotely suggested the story McKenna told or had done any of the things McKenna charged.
